lane while on the M4 Drivers would be hit with tough fines if they didn't stick to their lane while on the M4 A new crackdown on lane-changing would see drivers fined up to £100 for moving out of the lane if road markings and traffic signs are ignored. The changes come as part of a £7.6m scheme to deter motorists from cutting through roadworks and for other offences. After an increase in accidents caused by lane-changing, Highways England will be introducing new signage and markings to warn drivers of the dangers of cutting through roadworks. The scheme will also address other road safety issues like the use of mobile phones and vehicle occupants not wearing seat belts. Signage and markings will also feature on camera if a driver cuts across lane markings or lanes of traffic. Cutting through roadworks However, if drivers are already out of the lane and cut across other vehicles or a lane marking, they could face a  $\pounds 100$  fine.
