The hydraulic shock absorber also has a pressure adjusting mechanism with a first pressure chamber, a second pressure chamber, and a valve mechanism having at least one movable valve element, and the pressure adjusting mechanism acts on the valve mechanism and the valve mechanism acts on the piston rod. Such shock absorbers are used in the wheel suspension of vehicles, especially in the wheel suspension of motorcycles. An object of the present invention is to provide a hydraulic shock absorber that is simple in design and which, in addition to providing adequate shock damping, is able to prevent the pressure buildup in the pressure chambers and hence f3e1b3768c
