According to Variety, the 875-seat Prince's Theater could be the home for Broadway's first billion-dollar show. The cost of a ticket is currently $399, but this price is set to rise in the coming weeks. The show would star pop star-turned-actor Justin Timberlake, who will release a new album this week. He'd play a "thwomping new superhero," reports Variety, in an adaptation of DC Comics' Ratchet & Clank. The possibility of Timberlake starring in this musical is just one of many reasons why this show could be a smash hit. Click to see more reasons why it could be a hit. Matilda the Musical made $96.4 million after just 28 performances at London's Old Vic Theater last summer. Box-office expectations are off the charts for the new show, reports Variety, which could be bringing in a $1 billion gross in the first year alone. This would be great news for a musical that could cause this theater to close. Thankfully, the theater is set to reopen in mid-May with a show called The Lion King. Click for more other big shows. Dopamine receptor in functional recovery of the sensory and sensorimotor system after spinal cord injury. Cultured dorsal root ganglion (DRG) cells were used to study a potential role of dopamine in spinal cord injury (SCI) recovery. In SCI rats, plasma dopamine release was increased during the initial stages of SCI and rapidly decreased in the following weeks. In vitro, pretreatment of DRG cells with dopamine elevated cAMP and reduced the d4474df7b8
