It can extract the music from Karaoke disks for 3 different operating systems: Concerns have been raised over Australia's role in the campaign against the Islamic State (IS) group after an Australian Federal Police raid on the property of a suspect linked to a Melbourne mosque. The raid was "in relation to an investigation into the potential commission of an offence under the Criminal Code of [Australia]", according to a statement from the AFP. The Australian reported that the raid took place in the suburb of Point Cook in the afternoon of February 3, around six months after the arrival of foreign fighters to the Syria-Iraq border. The foreign fighters, who originally came from Europe, have been targeted by security services as the terror group expands across the Middle East and North Africa. In a video statement, the raid was described as "a successful operation", which saw four AFP officers seize a number of items and issue a "warrant of execution" to be executed against an unknown suspect who was believed to be in possession of a black Samsung laptop. A statement released by the mosque in the suburb of Preston was critical of the government's actions. "During the past few months, the Islamic Community of Bayswater has observed and listened to a number of local residents and community members voicing concern at the escalating tensions and foreign fighters entering Australia as a result of the Bali bombings in 2002," the statement read. "Bayswater is a peaceful community that does not condone terrorist acts. The ongoing detention and deportation of foreign fighters would be clearly counter-productive to the ongoing community healing process." While the mosque does not share information on its members and associates, it is believed that a number of Australian nationals have travelled to join the fighting in Syria and Iraq. Several Australians travelled to join Islamic State, including two teenage girls who joined the terror group in the summer of 2014 and were later killed. On Thursday, senior national security officials warned against Australians joining the IS group, saying it is a "completely different class of people from what they expected in Iraq or Syria". "In Iraq and Syria, it's the same as in any war — it's a fight between good and evil and good is not good on the battlefield. So if someone joins you they're either a very good actor or they are naive," a senior official said. "And if they join you and if they're killed they're very likely to go home to get married and have children and not a bad person, but they will be very bad people if they come back home and do something to an Australian." The Australian
