Oct 17, 2011 Yep, what I thought. However, the problem is the software just (stupidly) doesn't have an "Archive" feature. So what I had to do was go back a folder and then copy and paste the entire project. This is the kind of thing that normally you would've expected the software to be able to do for you without such trouble. Nepal's Next Move On Trianti The government of Nepal has made no public announcement as of yet regarding the deployment of troops into the Trianti area. A first response will be the deployment of special teams from the police and the armed forces. The major threat in the Trianti region is that Nepal's exclusive claim to Trianti will be challenged, especially if the Chinese claim their right to Trianti is also to be challenged. It is important that any hostile move by Nepal be dealt with as quickly and decisively as possible. Preliminary statements by Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Indra Jaiswal on Nepal's position in the Kautilya Zone were widely misinterpreted, especially by Nepali media and the Nepali Embassy in Beijing. Indra Jaiswal's statement could be taken to indicate that Nepal will recognize China's sovereignty over the Trianti area. However, many such statements do not necessarily signify Nepal's position. Chang Xiaochuan's speech on Nepal's asylum request at the United Nations General Assembly did not imply that Beijing would recognize Nepali sovereignty over the Trianti region. Nepali party influence in the government of Nepal may have been misinterpreted as well. No official statement has been made by the Nepali Prime Minister or the Nepali Cabinet. The Chief of Staff to the Prime Minister referred to China's previous announcements on the issue of Trianti. Although protests and demonstrations are taking place in the Trianti area, which is controlled by the Nepali Army, there has been no agitation of the kind seen in Bhotia. Threats to Nepal by the Tibetan Independence Movement of Mongolia have been much worse, in terms of the intensity of the threats and the visible display of their determination to act on the threats. The next move by Nepal's state is dependent on the actions of the armed forces on the ground in the Trianti region. The General Staff must be contacted urgently and in the meantime China should be made to realize that Nepal would not voluntarily surrender its claim to Trianti.
