I checked the printer, no error. I checked the latest software, no problem. I checked the settings (see note), they were correct. . Sep 11, 2019 I am using Acrorip 9.0.3 on a Epson printer. Colours are working perfectly on a screen but not on a printout. When I change the colour settings on the 'Colour settings' tab, it still defaults to 48-bit RGB colour, and I can't see how to change it. . Sep 12, 2019 Latest version available. I use it on an

Epson p600 (UV printer DTG). Very good for (UV) printing. You have to install the console though as it is an standalone program as are the Professional . Jul 3, 2019 I have an Epson P600 DTG printer and Acrorip full version 8.2.6. I have reset the settings on the software many times and re installed the software on my computer. I also reset the printer itself and found some settings are just not there. Then I switched to a different printer. The same problem. The only thing that I could do was turn off then restart the printer and the settings would come back. All settings except the colour balance (brightness) are not there. Why would that happen? If I reset the printer settings would all settings be lost? . Mar 14, 2020 AcroRip is a software that supports setting the print settings and properties on Epson printers. The software is based on Windows® 8.1, Windows 10, and Windows .
