Demo: Developer: Hysteroscopy for recurrent adenomyosis. Recurrent adenomyosis (rAD) is characterized by the recurrence of endometrial tissue in the myometrium. Initial treatment includes resection of endometrial tissue with hysterectomy. In this case series, we analyzed the outcomes of rAD and hysteroscopy-assisted uterine preserving treatment. This was a retrospective study of consecutive cases of rAD treated with hysteroscopy. Patients were divided into two groups according to treatment outcome (success or failure). Success was defined as removal of all endometrial tissue and recurrent adenomyosis-free follow-up control. Twenty-three cases of rAD were treated with hysteroscopy. Endometrial tissue was present in the uterus in all cases (n = 23). Six cases were treated as a single hysteroscopy and 17 cases were treated as two or more hysteroscopies. All cases but three (13/23; 57.5%) were treated successfully. The rates of total resection of endometrial tissue were 92.3% (8/9) for the initial operation and 68.7% (8/11) for the second and subsequent operations. The rates of recurrent adenomyosis-free follow-up control were 36.5% (8/22) at 1 year and 25% (5/20) at 2 years. Hormonal treatment was required in all cases (n = 23). Hysteroscopy was effective as an initial treatment or retreatment for rAD.Q: How to find total count of rows (only first occurrence ) in an SQLite table? "We're very grateful," said Lyric Champagne, executive director of the Media Is My Friend Foundation. "It's not supposed to be about him. It's about justice for Alton Sterling and for Philando Castile and for so many people." Sterling, who was 37 when he was killed in Baton Rouge, La., on Tuesday evening, and Castile, a 32-year-old black man, were shot by police during confrontations that were being livestreamed on Facebook. Champagne said that of the $10,000 that the Media Is My Friend Foundation had collected before Tuesday, she was confident it would be able to raise at least a quarter of that amount. The nonprofit's goal is to use the donations to help people who want to open their own businesses and give them the tools they need. The funds had been held in a separate account. "We have a lot of people that want to give to us, but they're afraid," Champagne said. "They don't want to give us money if their name is being printed in the news. We want to make sure our dollars are going to people that are in need and not going to people like us." She said her group is going to do a fundraiser to put the rest of the money from the prior donation into the account to keep it available for now and to put money into a trust that will be able to distribute funds to people for a long time. "We are having a hard time getting donors to give because people are afraid that their names are going to be out in the news," Champagne said. "The only way that we can make money is if we have people giving to us." Trudy Rubin, a professor of political science at Rutgers University and author of the book "The 09e8f5149f

S.F. budget plan surges ahead, despite controversial airport plan City planners spent the last five years looking for ways to transform the city. Now, they have a vision of exactly what's next for the city: an airport that ultimately has 19,000 planned housing units, a farmer's market on the roof of the Transbay Transit Center, a bicycle hub that would one day connect to a new Bay Bridge and a publicly owned office tower.
