I'm making a game similar to many board games. As well as a board, there are several pieces (that change their shape when in a particular state) and a "lose" card. Right now, I'm just starting to implement the mechanics and getting things working. Right now, I have an abstract Game class. This handles the basic checks and verifications. In my game, I have 2 players, and each player plays an Action. An Action has 6 states, and each player's action is only one of those. A typical game could work like this: player 1: flip a card player 2: move a piece player 1: flip a card player 1: move a piece player 2: move a piece player 2: flip a card ...etc. Now, I want to account for the fact that sometimes it can be a player's turn before the other player's, and sometimes the player does not have the desired action because the other player has already used it. I want to be able to detect when the game is over, and I was thinking about removing the line from the code in the Action class that terminates the turn in a "player break" state. Is it possible for me to know that another player has ended the game? If so, how? A: Since
