What's New In FRSTimeTrack?

Want to keep your personal or work projects organized and see if you have spent enough time on the tasks you have taken? FRSTimeTrack will help you with that. Description: You can use ProCon to organize your appointments in a way that is intuitive, convenient and easy-to-use. But when you need to work with the data that is already in it, you can always take a look at its source code or use its API to integrate its functionality in your application or website. Description: This article describes how to integrate GTDServer's API with Python/Django project. Description: I'm using a Kontakt player to display a "score" in real time using a Beep method. I have used Beep() method that "beeps" once and then stops. So I have to call it every second to make it work. But I'm wondering is there a way to keep beeping continuously? Description: In this article we will see how to perform search on Google Contacts using Google Contacts API. Google Contacts API allows developers to perform various search operations on Google Contacts. We will use the JSON-based search API of Google Contacts to retrieve the contact list from the Contacts database and search through the list. Example of the JSON-based Google Contacts API Search: Description: In this article we will learn to create Google Gmail App shortcuts to different account. Google has provided an API to create Gmail App shortcuts. We can take advantage of this API to create Gmail App shortcuts. We can add multiple accounts to a shortcut and share it with people who are using the Google Apps for Business. Create Gmail App Shortcut for Gmail Before we start creating Gmail App shortcuts, create a Google Apps account (Preferably Gmail) and create a user.

Description: Acantha is an open-source Swiss tool for accessing and processing laboratory results from hospital medical records. It was written in Java and is available as a jar file. It is based on the MyAccess project, a useful framework that abstracts the database layer and provides basic communication (including web service) with the results. Acantha is an extension of this framework. It supports different database types, it allows offline management of results and the possibility to use PostgreSQL instead of MyAccess's SQLite database.
