cancer. A retrospective analysis was performed on 509 patients who underwent total gastrectomy for cancer between January 1986 and December 1995 in our department. Two groups were compared: group A consisting of 259 patients who were treated from 1986 to 1990 and group B consisting of 250 patients treated from 1991 to 1995. Mean postoperative (PO) hospital stay was 22.0 days in group A and 7.4 days in group B (P

Leftovers — by Bryan Decker Leftovers Posted on August 3, 2012 by Bryan Decker The idea of leftover food has been growing in popularity lately. If you're like me, you have a 2 for $9 post-Thanksgiving day. You come home to find your fridge absolutely stuffed with stuffed bell peppers, potatoes, corn, pork chops...it's almost overwhelming. Don't worry, you do have options... 1. Leftovers are an easy dinner I recently gave leftover spaghetti and meatballs a try. It's a little trickier to get the right texture, but everyone seems to

ProcessProxifier

Make your program or game faster with this powerful proxy for Windows processes. ProcessProxifier is a lightweight program that acts as a proxy manager that can appoint a different configuration to each Windows process. User-friendly interface that makes it suitable for advanced and rookies alike Perhaps one of its main advantage is the high level of control given to the end user. Moreover, thanks to the clean and intuitive interface, it make configuration proxies easier, regardless of your experience with similar tools. The main window is divided into several sections, one of which lists all of the current processes. From this list, you can select the ones you want to be run on a specific proxy, which you should define in the Default Settings area. Provides a simplified way to reroute connections. If you want to assign a different proxy for each process, simply make a selection and enter the adjacent proxy information in the corresponding boxes of the corresponding entry in the list. In addition, if you know the name of the process whose proxy settings you want to change, enter it in the search box for quick retrieval. All that remains to be done is to start the proxy or proxies (in case you made individual configurations). If all settings were added correctly, then the program starts sniffing the routed connections and lists them somewhere in the lower part of the GUI. A simple tool that lets you assign proxies to individual processes

ProcessProxifier comes across as a steady and reliable application that can help you redirect the connections that a certain process makes to a preset proxy address. Simply put, it provides a simple solution to a allegedly complicated operation.

List of Process This program can be used to track the startup applications and to deactivate them. The list of startup applications usually shows all applications which run in startup mode and in Windows Vista the list of applications which have the service application in the general category of settings will be included. ProcessLifter provides you with a real-time list of the processes running on your computer. The application also gives you the possibility to close these processes with a single click. All the processes are listed alphabetically by the name of the executable file used to start them. The text shown is also preceded by a number of milliseconds since they were started. The first thing you should know about this tool is its limited list of features. It is a proxy manager, which means that it allows you to set proxy addresses for individual connections. It can be made for each process that needs to be redirected, which is why a thorough examination of the product is highly recommended, as there may be other processes that you want to also assign their own proxy. If you are looking for a highly customizable tool that allows you to assign proxies to individual processes, this is not the app for you. On the other hand, if you are looking for a minimalist yet efficient tool that can be used to make a few minor adjustments to an existing proxy, then it is your best choice. The tool is completely free to use and can be downloaded below. • Let's Talk. You are welcome to contact us via our official Facebook page or Twitter.
