When to get up and go - is it the hint when your body is too tired? That question arose when his wife found the abandoned dog from the night before lying sick in the living room. It was only when the dog came to him while he was lying down in bed that he noticed it was lame. He did not want to go to work, but he had to. After a short fight with his wife, the father agreed to run to the vet, but even then the dog could not walk. Then the vet diagnosed the dog with a bone fracture in his front leg. Dog taken to the vet in the car. And soon the question arose: When to get up and go? Because a dog with a broken leg can not be left alone for long hours. All this was the perfect excuse for the father to lie down for a while and take a nap, but yet he could not go to sleep. So he ended up next to his bed, with a warm blanket. The dog was gone when his wife returned from work. As soon as she saw the blanket near her husband's bed, she knew that the dog was still in the house. A few minutes later, the dog got up and walked slowly towards his master. His wife quickly called the vet, who arrived as soon as possible and diagnosed the dog with a broken leg.
