KEYMACRO is a standalone software application that allows you to control or modify nearly all of the PC keyboard keys on-the-fly from a remote computer. You can use it to create macros or alter the existing ones, or to simulate different kinds of keypresses. Its main advantage is that you can do this without having to use the PC keyboard or mouse, so you won't disrupt your current work. Keymacro can simulate most kinds of keypresses on the PC. The key mappings are customizable and you can adjust them to match your preferences. Keymacro works as a standalone tool that can be controlled from a remote computer. You can open it and then choose to use it with all available keyboard keys, just a few of them, or none at all. KEYMACRO is an essential tool for game developers and other computer users who want to make their work as stress-free as possible. Create a macro Keymacro lets you create new key mappings, alter or delete existing ones, or define a new key combination that can be used to control it. To make it easier, the application offers three modes to help you build your custom macro: the Define Mode, which contains an unlimited number of key mappings, the Assign Mode, which lets you create your own macros to assign them to specific keys, and the Modify Mode, where you can edit any key mapping, but not create new ones. Alter existing mappings Use the Modify Mode to adjust the settings of all key mappings. You can make changes to the appearance of a key or a key combination. For example, you can make it print a text message, change its color, enable or disable it, or even enter a specific code. You can also change the speed at which a key is pressed or added to the list of key mappings. Define a new key mapping Use the Assign Mode to create a key mapping that can then be used in the Define Mode. With this mode, you can set a key combination that can be used with any key in the Define Mode. Add keys to the Modify Mode You can use the Modify Mode to add or remove keys to the list of key mappings. For example, you can add a function key, the Windows logo key, or an F1 key combination. You can also add keys from the list of assigned macros. You can even specify a prefix for the macro. Logic 77a5ca646e
