Primary immunodeficiency disorders (PIDs) are associated with increased susceptibility to infections, autoimmune disorders, and lymphoproliferative diseases. We have hypothesized that PID-associated defects in T cells and/or B cells underlie this increased susceptibility. We have examined several T-cell-dependent antigens (TDAs) for the ability to activate B cells from patients with selective B-cell deficiencies. We have used TDAs to probe B cells from patients with X-linked agammaglobulinemia (XLA) and with CVID because these disorders are associated with a selective B-cell deficiency. We

What's New In Foo Psf?
