focus in mantle cell
lymphoma treatment.
Mantle cell lymphoma
(MCL) is a mature B cell neoplasm with characteristic genetic abnormalities and cytogenetic profile. It usually presents with aggressive clinical course and poor prognosis.
Therapeutic approaches
usually vary from one patient to another, and

response to therapy is variable. In recent years, a great progress in the knowledge of this disease has been achieved. This review is a compilation of the most significant advances in treatment of MCL, and highlights the most relevant literature during the last five years.

Publications include advances in pre-clinical and clinical research in MCL, and treatment modalities and new treatment options for MCL. The prognosis of MCL has been improved by new treatments. After several years of the study of the roles of the BCL2 protein in the pathogenesis of the disease, proteasome inhibitors in particular, have established themselves as new therapeutic modalities in MCL, as important additions to the armamentarium of clinicians for the treatment of the disease.

Recently, a novel therapeutic approach against immunologic and genetic abnormalities found in MCL has been indicated. Interfering with the function of the "B cell receptor (BCR)" with a BCR blocking antibody, a monoclonal antibody directed against the membrane immunoglobulin (MICA) and a monoclonal antibody directed against CD45RA have promising results in MCL treatment. Build a flexible, modern application using React and TypeScript with this popular webpack and ESLint setup.
