The method produces a byte array that contains the value of the computed thumbprint. To calculate a digital signature for a certificate, you can use the `[StoreName.Open]` method of the enumeration. You must specify the store name to use this method. After you specify a store name, you can obtain a certificate by calling the method. Then you can call the `CreateThumbprint` method to calculate a digital signature. You must pass a byte array that contains the public key that is used to generate the signature value. ## See also - [\[Digital Signatures \(Mono\)\]](#)(- [\[Encryption \(Mono\)\]](#)([\[Antibiotic-associated hemorrhagic colitis\]](#). Simultaneous cortical somatosensory evoked potentials and cerebral blood flow in the awake pig. This study, which is the first of its kind, evaluated whether multichannel somatosensory cortical evoked potentials can be recorded in awake animals. In addition, we correlated the amplitude of the evoked potentials to cerebral blood flow (CBF) changes. To this end, the responses to electrical stimulations of the left median and radial nerves were recorded and compared between cortical electroencephalographic (EEG) and laser-Doppler monitoring in 13 pigs. Cerebral blood flow was assessed by the 133-Xe inhalation technique. Three to six consecutive evoked potentials were averaged for each signal. Cortical somatosensory evoked potentials (SEPs) were recorded in all animals, demonstrating monophasic or biphasic responses. In parallel, a CBF increase was observed for all cortical areas investigated. The relationship between the amplitude of the evoked potentials and that of the CBF was statistically significant (p < 0.05).
