.class[]{@link StringUtils} Create a shortcut to StringUtils. 20. Create a shortcut to Java's standard package object, java.lang. 21. Create a shortcut to the java.util.Date class. 22. Create a shortcut to java.io.Serializable. 23. Create a shortcut to the java.awt.Event. 24. Create a shortcut to the javax.swing.event. 25. Create a shortcut to the javax.swing.JComponent. You can take advantage of NetBeans internal completion system to make completion suggestions based on the methods you use. For example, if you type: public static void foo (java.util.Date x) then press , you will see a list of methods and classes that have a foo method in their implementation and signature: public static void foo (java.util.Date x); Press to select the correct method from the menu. When you create a shortcut, you can also specify the JAR file containing the class which the shortcut points to. If you create a shortcut for a class in the com.foo package, specify the name of the JAR file containing com.foo. If the JAR file contains multiple packages, use a comma to separate them. For example, if you define a shortcut to the javax.swing.JComponent, specify the JAR filename as: libs/com.sun.swing_1.3.2_02/swing.jar You can also specify the JAR file containing classes whose constructor you want to call. This functionality can also be accessed from the context menus in the editor, such as the context menu for a variable. The shortcut context menu item will contain a 'Call constructor of' command which will allow you to point to a package and call a constructor for the class or classes in that package. For example, if you create a shortcut to the javax.swing.JComponent, use the menu to select the javax.swing package in which the class is defined. The shortcut will then call the javax.swing.JComponent() constructor. See org.netbeans.modules.javascript.internal.nodejs.NodeJSClassImplementation org.netbeans.modules.javascript.

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) said one of its convoy members was attacked by the group in the village of Al Suran, in the Jabal al-Zawiya region near Marea. The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a monitoring group, said that group comprised 15 men armed with knives and clubs. It said the group was identified as members of Faylaq al-Sham, an Islamist group which considers itself separate from the violent al-Qaeda-linked group Jabhat al-Nusra. The man, a Syrian working for the ICRC, was stabbed in the shoulder, and was treated on site, according to the ICRC. The attack occurred in front of the town's council building. The man said his assailants were demanding work permits, which ICRC staff do not issue. In a statement released overnight, the UN said its "facility in Al Suran was attacked yesterday afternoon by unidentified men". "The facility was visited by a convoy carrying Syrian and international humanitarian assistance, which was later attacked by armed individuals," said the statement. "Three UN convoys have been attacked in Jibrin since the beginning of November, carrying almost 10,000 tons of food
