Effect of superoxide dismutase on the K+-induced release of secretory phospholipase A2 from isolated rat submandibular gland acini. It has been proposed that generation of reactive oxygen species is a primary step in the secretory-degranulating action of ATP on K+-stimulated rat submandibular acinar cells. The aim of this study was to elucidate the mechanism of the reactive oxygen species in the K+-induced secretory-degranulating action of ATP on the acini. The superoxide dismutase (SOD) in the acini was inactivated with diethyldithiocarbamic acid. After incubation with K+, a large release of phospholipase A2 (PLA2) and electrolytes was noted.

With SOD, the K+-induced calcium influx and PLA2 release were both reduced. The release of PLA2 was associated with an increase in the phosphorylation of 40-kDa calcium-independent protein kinase C-alpha in the acini. The SOD restored the phosphorylation of 40-kDa calcium-independent protein kinase C-alpha and the release of PLA2. These results suggest that reactive oxygen species participate in the action of ATP in the K+-induced secretory-degranulating action on the acini. 595f342e71
