Firewall App Blocker is a very efficient and user-friendly application that allows you to set firewall blocking rules without an advanced level of know-how. Traditionally, such a task requires that you perform a number of complex operations, which beginners need extensive guidance for. Using Firewall App Blocker, blocking a certain application through the Windows firewall is an easy and fully automated operation that any computer user, regardless of their level of IT knowledge can carry out. Another advantage of the program is its portability, which means it doesn't require installation and moreover, can be carried on a removable drive and launched on any machine without leaving a footprint on the system's registry. The list of upsides is complemented by an intuitive interface that despite lacking eye candying elements, remains user-friendly throughout your whole experience with it. Adding an application to the block list is possible using the dedicated menu or button, but drag and drop is also supported. The right-click menu will reveal a great deal of options, amongst which the possibility to unblock, remove, rename, block all, run file, open folder location and other useful functions. The whole list can be exported to a INI configuration file and imported at a later time, if you will. You can also reset the Windows firewall settings, but please note that this operation will revert any changes you've made since the OS has been installed. On an ending note, Firewall App Blocker spears you the effort of performing complicated configurations in order to block program files and delivers an easy and user-oriented approach to achieving this in a couple of clicks. Firewall App Blocker is a very efficient and user-friendly application that allows you to set firewall blocking rules without an advanced level of know-how.

Thanks, KimberlyIt's a rare moment in the history of the NBA when a team will compete during the NBA Finals without any of its star players. For the first time since 2003, the San Antonio Spurs — who won the NBA title when Tim Duncan retired — are now competing without their most valuable player. Without Tim Duncan, the Spurs need every player to take on a big role in the playoffs. Kawhi Leonard — a player the Spurs traded for this season to become the franchise's franchise player — has been tremendous as of late. He's averaging a league-high 17.1 points and shooting 40.6 percent from beyond the arc. In the last three games, he scored 19 points or more in each of the games, showing he's capable of taking over games and making all of the calls on defense. Even without Duncan, who has been out with a quad injury for the past week, the Spurs still have Tony Parker at point guard, LaMarcus Aldridge at power forward and Manu Ginobili at shooting guard. In addition, the Spurs also have versatile forwards Danny Green (6-foot-7) and DeJuan Blair (6-foot-8), who can play small forward. And don't forget about DeMar DeRozan, who averaged 25.4 points as a small forward during the regular season. The Spurs are also very deep at center with Tiago Splitter (6-foot-9) and David Lee (6-foot-10) handling the majority of the minutes at the position, and Boris Diaw (6-foot-8) and Patty Mills (6-foot
