Last week, we got to see the first trailer for Wolfenstein II: The New Colossus, the sequel to 2014's Wolfenstein: The New Order. Today, we get to see a few more clips from the film, and they're (so far) in line with the previews we've seen before. In the new trailer, we see a quick overview of World War II, with one soldier taking off his helmet to reveal a swastika on his forehead. He then spends a long time setting up a machine gun, turning to the audience and asking, "Care for a piece of history?" We also hear the "Boom, boom, boom" line we first heard in the trailer, and that's a lot of metal hitting the ground. We next see the famous speech by Robert Ludlum. It starts with a man saying, "This is a story about the end of the world," and shows B.J. Blazkowitz (who also appears in the reveal video) doing that "Check the time" thing from the original game. We then get the famous line, "Ludlum's got a plan," and this time we see both B.J. and alternate universe Colonel Wallace fighting Nazis in a room marked "Ludlum." The trailer then shows Death Incarnate, aka Frau Engel, and "one of the last surviving members of [the] Old Guard," which probably refers to Manfred von Richthofen. He's shown meeting B.
