Adobe Photoshop Elements Adobe Photoshop Elements is a less expensive alternative to Photoshop. It costs $119.99, and, although it doesn't have the same features, its drawing tools include freehand lines, straight and circular shapes, and construction lines. Adobe Acrobat The following chapter takes a look at an alternative file format for images and documents. Adobe Acrobat is an alternative to Microsoft Word. It does not provide word processing functionality, but it does allow you to open, edit, and save Adobe Word documents. Your Editing Activity This chapter explains how your Photoshop actions can be tailored to meet your specific needs. For example, how to selectively clone and duplicate images, using different command options, and how to remove unwanted parts from an image. How to Create Actions What Are Actions? Photoshop has many functions, which are sometimes referred to as operations. You can use these functions in different ways for different results. In most cases, only a basic knowledge of how to use these functions in Photoshop is needed. Many functions even have ready-made options that are easy to use. These functions are grouped into Actions. Actions are recorded commands for repeated tasks, or editing processes that create customized Photoshop commands. Creating Actions The best way to create actions is to record your Photoshop commands into a separate file so that they can be used over and over. You can use separate actions for a number of functions, such as adding or removing objects from an image, or creating a repeated gradient or color. There are three ways to record or save an action in Photoshop. The first is to create a new template action. The second is to drag-and-drop your files into a folder for an action. The third is to save the actions to a Photoshop Template. Creating a New Action Opening the Actions Panel When you create a new action file, you can add the same commands or commands that are already on a template or a new layer. But if you want to use a different command, you need to create a new file. To create a new action file, you open the Actions panel, illustrated in Figure 6-1. From the Layers panel, you can choose layer 1, folder 1 (if you have layers in a folder), or the New Action item in the panel to create a new action file. You can also create a new folder for your new action file. ---
