Q: Is there a rule for finding the divisibility of a multiple of two numbers using modular arithmetic? I've been trying to crack this for some time, but it seems like it should be easy, and I am trying to figure out why its not... Let's say I want to find the divisibility of 35, by 7 and by 5, for example. Is this correct? Convert 5 to its equivalent prime factorization: $(2,5) = 2 * (1,5) = 2 * (1,2,5) = (2,2,5)$ Convert 7 to its equivalent prime factorization: $(3,7) = (1,7) = (1,1,7)$ $(35) = 7 * (5) = (7,1,5)$ The highest power of 7 in 35 is 5, so 35 is divisible by 5 $(7^5) 35 = (7,1,5) = (5) (7,1,1) = (5) (1,7,1) = (5) (1,5,2)$ The highest power of 7 in 35 is 3, which means 35 is not divisible by 7. $(3,7) \neq (7,1,5)$ If I assume that the highest power of a number always divides the number evenly, is this always true? And is there a way of writing this rule to put it into an algorithm? A: Yes, the highest power dividing n is as you say always the highest power dividing n raised to that power. The rule for this is that if a and b are coprime and r is the highest power of a dividing n , then any multiple of a^r is
