"I spoke to Trump and he couldn't understand it," says Cohn. "He thought it should have sold the day they took the downer ad out, but he had lost interest by then." Cohn and Burch say that they are confident that they will make the money back from renting the house and the sign, as the popularity of the Trump brand has grown. "We've already sold two books," says Burch. "That's actually not true," says Cohn. "We did sell one book to the Humes at home at an airport book-signing. It was a family book, Baby Sitters Wanted, by Jill Kargman. And we sold four or five of Jill's books, because she's an author, and she's selling well in Australia. "And we have a lot of these signed works from American celebrities. I have a White House guide signed by Robert De Niro. I have one signed by Kevin Bacon. Kevin Bacon is the most popular person in Australia. "We may sell one or two hundred books," he says. "So we'll make some profit." But they don't expect it to be much. "We can't have expensive publicity," he says. "But it's not going to
