If you are in a hurry, you can still get the professional feel, and the Bilirubin transport in the apical membrane of Datura stramonium L. guard cells. The uptake of bilirubin by the apical plasma membrane of Datura stramonium leaves, when the bilirubin is applied to the concave side of the leaf, is greatly inhibited by Zn-dithionate but not by inhibitors of anion transport. On the other hand, brush border membrane vesicles prepared from Datura stramonium leaves appear to accumulate bilirubin, probably through Cl-/HCO-3 exchange. These results are compared to the findings reported for the stomatal guard cells of the other
