Exploring the mechanism of neurotoxicity induced by mercuric chloride in SH-SY5Y cells. Mercury contamination has become a global problem, especially in Asia. Traditional views consider mercury as a toxic heavy metal with a high protein binding capacity, but recent evidence has shown that mercuric chloride can damage neurons and influence cognitive function. However, the mechanism remains unclear. In the present study, cell viability, reactive oxygen species (ROS) generation, mitochondrial activity, apoptosis and calcium signaling were examined to explore the mechanisms of mercuric chloride-induced neurotoxicity in SH-SY5Y cells. The viability of SH-SY5Y cells decreased significantly in a concentration- and time-dependent manner after mercury exposure. Mercury exposure led to significant elevation of ROS generation, as evidenced by the ROS assays. Mercury exposure induced mitochondrial membrane potential (MMP) reduction and the release of mitochondrial cytochrome c, leading to activation of caspase-3. Furthermore, a large number of abnormal calcium ion channels were activated in mercury-induced SH-SY5Y cells. Mercury treatment impaired the function of ion channels, including sodium channels and calcium channels. Overall, these findings suggest that mercury affects SH-SY5Y cell viability, by activating mitochondria to cause cell apoptosis and regulating calcium ion channels to induce cell death.Q d0c515b9f4

If I open the table in Excel, select all cells and copy paste them to something else, the table shows up as the data table without the type. A: To directly access the data table in Excel you need to use the Range.DataBodyRange property instead of just Range. What you are doing should work but you are using the wrong property. For further help please let me know. A: It's part of the problem, but there are also ways to have Excel treat it like an Excel table. Here are some other strategies: In Excel, click any cell that contains the text. Excel will convert the cell into an Excel table, and you can work with it just as you would with the Excel table.
